The School of Art + Design

Portland State University's School of Art + Design is dedicated to helping students understand and explore the ways that artists, designers, and their works function within a larger social context. With 1,100 undergraduate majors and minors, a vibrant and growing graduate program, a dedicated faculty of internationally recognized artists, designers, scholars, and a dynamic visiting artist program, PSU's School of Art + Design is a place where students from a variety of backgrounds interact, exchange ideas and cross conventional aesthetic boundaries.

Many prominent Northwest artists, designers, and art historians began their professional careers by studying in our programs at Portland State University. Our graduates have used their training in the School of Art + Design as the basis for careers in a wide variety of fields, from the arts to commerce, industry, and education. Art and design, which require personal initiative and imagination, as well as the development of skills in mental and manual dexterity, can provide students with a background well suited for applications that are wide-reaching and greatly rewarding.

The School of Art + Design helps students develop a visual, verbal, and critical language of the arts that has the positive impact on the future and engages with our communities. Since visual arts are a form of communication-related to all other forms, understanding the theoretical bases and critical interpretations of this communication is a crucial component of our curriculum. At the same time, because the visual arts are a unique form of communication, students are trained in the necessary technical skills, theories, terminology and processes specific to the production of the visual arts.

As part of an urban university, the mission of the School of Art + Design is dedicated to helping students understand and experience ways that artists, designers, and their works are involved in a larger social context, both in the contemporary world and in the course of world history. Whether in the studio, computer lab, lecture hall, or working in the community via internships, service projects, exhibitions, and collaborations, our students have the opportunity to forge connections between traditions of visual art and their own developing expression.

Students enrolled in the School of Art + Design at PSU will acquire:

- Knowledge and experience of the creative problem-solving processes.
- Knowledge of discipline-specific skills and vocabulary.
- · Knowledge of art history and design.
- Knowledge of critical theories in art.
- Knowledge and experience to formulate a cumulative body of work in their discipline.

Following the example of other programs in the School of Art + Design, we plan to focus on the subsequent sections of the assessment plan in our subsequent faculty meetings. In particular, we will be discussing how individual ARH courses allow students to develop the program's learning outcomes during our meeting on May 17, 2019; we will be using the curriculum map presented below.

Campus-Wide Learning Outcomes

PSU's Campus-wide Learning Outcomes specifically address Creative and Critical Thinking, Communication, and Engagement, all of which are core values of our program and embedded throughout the curricula. To complete a Formalized Assessment Plan, the ARH program will discuss how our program fulfills the campus-wide learning outcomes during the Fall 2019 academic quarter.

Representative Courses

To complete a formalized assessment plan, the ARH program will discuss how to select representative courses from our program during the Fall 2019 academic quarter. As part of this discussion, we will also discuss what evaluation criteria, findings, and data to include in our assessment plan.

Overall Program Assessment Summary

The Art History program has been engaging in various assessment strategies since its conception. However, 2019 is the first year for us to formally compile and submit assessment documentation to the Provost and OAI. This first year is developmental on our end, and we have discussed with OAI an incremental plan over the next few years to learn and grow through the process. We would appreciate any feedback towards that aim, and if we are missing any specific documentation please contact us, as we likely have it. In preparing this document, we drafted our program's learning outcomes. We expect to continue working on our formalized assessment plan throughout the AY 2019-2020.
