Big ideas for our transportation future

Portland is often considered the leader in progressive multi-modal transportation systems, but competitors such as Minneapolis, Chicago and New York City are rapidly outpacing it. On Monday, Oct. 27, OTREC presents "Let's Be Fearless: Big Ideas for our Transportation Future" at 6 p.m. in the ground floor Parkway North in Smith Union. OTREC has gathered 15 of Portland's "brightest minds and engaging personalities" to sell their next big idea for the future of Portland's transportation system in three minutes or less. OTREC, Oregon Transportation Research and Education Consortium, is located on campus. READ MORE

Office hours with the president

Faculty and staff are invited to meet casually with President Wim Wiewel on Wednesday, Oct. 29, from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. in the Simon Benson House. The president is hosting a series of open office hours to ensure more accessibility for faculty and staff. A sign-up sheet is located at the event, and the time allotted to each person will depend on the number of people signed up. For more information, contact the president's office at 5-4411 or visit the president's website.

Costume sale in Lincoln Hall

Urban agriculture book: Backyard chickens weren't always trendy

Urban agriculture has come full circle over the past 200 years, says PSU History Professor Catherine McNeur, author of the new book, Taming Manhattan: Environmental Battles in the Antebellum City, published by Harvard University Press. While based in Manhattan, the book's stories of old laws that ban urban livestock and agriculture—which remain on the books today—ring true for Portland and other cities across the country.
