

Myth #1

“Homeless camps are responsible for all the trash cluttering public land.”

Nearly 80% of the illegal dumps cleaned up by Metro are caused by businesses or people living in homes who have garbage service

-Metro’s 2017 report

Myth #2

“People experiencing homelessness are flocking to Portland for the services.”

Fewer than 10% of those living unsheltered report coming to Multnomah County for services. Family or job opportunities were the most popular reasons.

-Multnomah County’s 2017 Point in Time Count

Myth #3

“It’s the opioid epidemic and mental illness.”

Only one in four report a serious mental illness and one in five report a substance use disorder. The rates are higher for those living unsheltered. Studies show that housing helps improve recovery rates for both.

-2018 U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development report

Myth #4

“You can see the scope of the homelessness problem by the number of tents in the city.”

About half of those experiencing homelessness sleep at shelters or transitional housing. That doesn’t include those living doubled up with friends and family, which means the issue is larger than what you see.

-Multnomah County’s 2019 Point in Time Count

Myth #5

“The county has invested millions into the homelessness crisis with nothing to show for it.”

18,951 people were served in permanent housing in Multnomah County last year.

-A Home for Everyone 2018 End of Year Outcomes Report

Myth #6

“The West Coast faces higher rates of homelessness due to their lax laws”
The West Coast faces one of the largest affordable housing shortages in the country.

-2018 Gap Report from the National Low Income Housing Coalition

Myth #7

“There are plenty of shelter beds available for those who sleep on the streets.”

There are enough emergency beds to serve fewer than half of those experiencing homelessness in Oregon

-The National Alliance to End Homelessness

Myth #8

“Providing services makes the problem worse.”

If we do nothing to fix the systemic problems including access to affordable housing, the rates of homelessness will continue to climb.

-2018 report by ECONorthwest titled Homelessness in the Portland Region

Myth #9

“People of color are less likely to experience homelessness.”

African Americans are twice as likely and Native Americans are five times as likely to experience homelessness.

-Multnomah County's 2019 Point in Time Count

Myth #10

“University students don't experience homelessness.”

One in seven university students experience homelessness.

-2019 College and University Basic Needs Insecurity: A National #RealCollege Survey

Myth #11

“They just need to get a job.”

A job doesn't protect you from homelessness. Approximately 75% of low-income households in the Portland area pay more than half of their income on rent, putting them at extreme risk of homelessness.

-The Gap: A Shortage of Affordable Rental Housing by the National Low Income Housing Coalition

Myth #12

"Homelessness is difficult to predict."

Economists use housing affordability to predict the severity of homelessness. One formula shows a 10% increase in rent leads to a 13.6% increase in the rate of homelessness.

-Economists John Quigley and Steven Raphael