What is the strongest aspect of our department?

Student Responses
- European Course offerings
- They always open their office for advice
- Its flexibility in offering credit for certain courses and activities
- Language, study abroad, and global internships
- The professors who know their class/profession inside and out. It helps us think out side the box.
- Availability of guidance
- The inter-disciplinary approach brings a broader perspective the global understanding that is lacking in this day and age.
- Visiting professors/professors from the university who teach classes about their countries of origin
- Decent regional area concentrations
- The professors
- Diversity, it is a very diverse department, with members from all over the world that are able to teach a broad range of classes and cover multiple aspects of their topics
- Middle East Studies has had some good professors
- Connected learning, intro to Intl. development, colloquiums, regional studies
- Great professors, challenging courses, lots of variety, a very multi disciplinary field of study

What is the weakest aspect of our department?

Student Responses
- I feel like just a number- no advisor was given to me and I feel like I have to fight other students for an advisors time.
- Regional focus classes
- The regional focus aspect. Its limiting!
- Lack of class diversity and availability
- Sometimes it is a bit laid back and not challenging enough
- Charges too much for out of state students and students in general
- To few international students
- Good professors of Middle East studies keep leaving
- I am not sure because I have only taken one course from this department
- Intro to Intl Studies, cross-listing intro to regional studies, university studies, understanding the Intl. Experience
- So many random requirements- colloquiaums, understanding the international experience etc.
