David Bangsberg, dean of the OHSU-PSU School of Public Health, speaks at the January 17 member meeting in 333 Smith Memorial Student Union.

David Bangsberg examines public health on January 17

DAVID BANGSBERG, FOUNDING DEAN of the OHSU-PSU School of Public Health, speaks to RAPS Thursday, January 17, on “Why Public Health Matters: Reflections on HIV to Homelessness.” Before joining the PSU faculty in 2016, Bangsberg was a professor at Harvard School of Medicine and School of Public Health as well as a visiting professor at Mbarara University of Science and Technology in Uganda and Vellore Institute of Technology in India.

A native Oregonian, he earned a bachelor’s degree in neuroscience from the University of Rochester, a master’s degree in history and philosophy of science from Kings College London, and a medical degree from Johns Hopkins. His early research and advocacy focused on mitigating the harms caused by poverty, mental illness, substance use, and HIV.

Bangsberg completed his medical residency at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in north Harlem caring for patients afflicted by urban poverty, violence, and HIV. Upon completing fellowships at UC San Francisco in infectious disease and AIDS prevention and a master’s degree in public health from UC Berkeley, he became the leading expert in HIV and homelessness.

As former director of Massachusetts General Hospital Global Health, he brought together the expertise of Harvard and MIT to improve physical, mental, social, and economic health to the poorest regions of the world in several signature areas, including HIV care, disaster response, cancer care, and medical technology innovation.

The January 17 meeting starts with a light lunch at noon in 333 SMSU. Dean Bangsberg starts speaking at 12:45 pm.
Wine drawings may return!

THOSE OF YOU who have attended RAPS-sponsored monthly events know that over the past two years the “Vogie wine drawing” has been absent.

Typically two or three donated bottles of wine were raffled off to members who had the option of purchasing an unlimited number of tickets. The raffle was a significant fundraiser for the RAPS scholarship, raising on average between $500 and $1,000 annually over the 10-plus years that RAPS conducted the monthly raffle.

About a year ago the PSU Foundation determined that our raffle was violating two state rules. First, a raffle of any sort is considered gaming (not allowed for any organization associated with higher education), and second, RAPS was distributing alcohol without a license. Joan Shireman, RAPS’ current Scholarship Committee co-chair, has been in negotiation with the PSU Foundation Finance and Accounting Office, and together they have come up with the idea of offering door prizes. The door prize procedure entails offering every event attendant a free ticket. Each individual then has the option of making a donation.

The RAPS Board will be reviewing and making a determination of whether and how to move forward with a RAPS-door prize. Stay tuned!

Book Group

The RAPS Book Group met on December 18 at the home of Joan Shireman and discussed The Atomic Weight of Love, a novel by Elizabeth J. Church. Set in Los Alamos in the 1940s and the subsequent decades, it is the story of a woman who subverts her career aspirations to those of her husband. Her husband, working on the atomic bomb project, cannot share any of his work with her. She, while trapped in the customs of her era, nevertheless creates a rich, independent life for herself. Our discussion was thoughtful, with many of us finding parallels between the heroine’s life and our mothers’ lives. We were interested in exploring how expectations and opportunities had expanded by the time we ourselves were developing careers.

Our next meeting is on Tuesday, January 15, at 1:30 pm, at Nancy Chapman’s home. We will discuss Between the World and Me by Ta-Nehisi Coates. It is an acclaimed book, winner of many awards, and offers a framework for understanding the racial history of America and its current tensions. Nancy’s home is at 4214 NE Hazelfern Place, Portland. Call Nancy at 503-234-0162 or email her at chapmannj@comcast.net to let her know whether you will be able to be there.

In February we will read Salt to the Sea by Ruta Sepetys, a story of refugees fleeing the advancing Soviet army in 1945, and of the sinking of the MV Wilhelm Gustloff in the Baltic Sea, a major maritime tragedy that is not well known.

The book group meets at 1:30 pm on the third Tuesday of every month. New members are always welcome.

—Joan Shireman

Hiking Group

The RAPS Hiking Group met on Monday, December 17, at the home of Larry and Diane Sawyer to share a potluck lunch and plan for the 2019 hikes.

Our first hike of 2019 will explore part of the Tualatin River Greenway on January 22. We will meet at 9:30 am at the parking lot of Tualatin Public Library at 18878 SW Martinazzi Ave., Tualatin. The hike is an out-and-back, mostly along the Tualatin River Greenway, that will be roughly 3.5 miles in length along wide, paved trails and sidewalks. We will begin the hike with a visit to the library’s display of a mastodon skeleton and other artifacts discovered in nearby wetlands.

Next we will hike on trails that follow the Tualatin River and feature interpretive signs that present information ranging from geological timelines to local participation in the development of plank roads, some of the first transportation projects in the Pacific Northwest. Upon our return, hikers can enjoy lunch at a local restaurant.

For more information regarding the full Tualatin River Greenway trail please see the Oregon Hikers.org website: https://www.oregonhikers.org/field_guide/Tualatin_River_Greenway_Loop_Hike

If you plan to hike in January, please contact Larry Sawyer at 503-771-1616 or larry_sawyer@comcast.net. For more details about this hike or future hiking plans in 2019, please consult the RAPS hikers’ website: https://www.pdx.edu/raps/RAPS-Hikers

Past Tense—Remembering PSU’s first gym, the former Lincoln High basement

WHEN RAPS MEMBERS TOURED the newly renovated Peter W. Stott Center last September, they were mightily impressed with the scope and quality of the $52-million project. The facility bears little resemblance to the Health and Physical Education Building constructed on that spot in the 1960s. The centerpiece of the renovation is the new Viking Pavilion, a 3,000-seat arena where the Vikings play basketball and volleyball and where graduation ceremonies, concerts, and other public events are held.

It’s a far cry from the original gym Portland State acquired in 1952 when it moved into the former Lincoln High School on the corner of SW Broadway and Main. Known first as Old Main and now as Lincoln Hall, the building housed the entire operation of Portland State.

Located in the southeast corner of the basement, the gym was dubbed “the Black Hole of Calcutta” because of its darkness, low ceiling, and lack of fresh air. The low ceiling was especially problematic for basketball games, giving new meaning to the term “low overhead.” An arcing long shot launched by a player was more likely than not to hit a light fixture.

Charlie White, professor emeritus of history, recalls a game in the old gym in the early to mid-1950s that pitted faculty against students. (Remember, this was a time when the faculty were not much older than the students.) The game was a fundraiser for United Way. Rather than charging admission, the organizers simply stopped the game a couple of times to pass the hat for donations. Sharkey Nelson was one of the coaches for the faculty.

Although Charlie played basketball in high school, he was too short to be a serious contender but he could run fast. Mindful of Charlie’s abilities, Sharkey advised him to slow the progress of the students as they ran down the court by grabbing the waistbands of their gym shorts from behind.

Today the space in Lincoln Hall where the gym used to be is part of the Music Recital Hall for the School of the Arts. The late Gordon Solie, emeritus professor of music, wrote about that remarkable transformation in a Past Tense article appearing in the RAPS Sheet in May 2011.
