Portland Tram

hike not just a walk in the park

The Sept. 28 tram hike wasn’t just a walk in the park—after all, it included a ride on the Portland Aerial Tram. But after taking it easy on the tram, it was off to Council Crest and the Oregon Zoo. Our hearty hikers were (left to right) Rudi Nussbaum, Laureen Nussbaum, Mary Brannan, Bob Tufts, and Larry Sawyer. Turn to page 3 for news about upcoming hikes.

Fall Fest ’07 attracts 10 Northwest schools

Representatives from 10 Northwest college and university retirement associations traveled to Portland State in late September to hear speakers, attend a wine tasting, enjoy a banquet, and listen to jazz during Fall Fest ’07.

Held at University Place, the meeting was the latest edition of a conference that has taken place annually for more than 20 years. Fall Fest fosters friendship and collegiality among university retirement associations.

Although the conference featured entertainment, wine tasting, and speakers, it also included breakout sessions that dealt with the organizations’ fiscal policies, programming, membership development, volunteerism, and lobbying. Former RAPS president Bruce Stern and current president Bob Tufts led the sessions.

PSU’s interim president, Michael Reardon, welcomed the group during its opening session, and former Oregon governor Barbara Roberts was the keynote speaker.

Roberts spoke of her life as governor and her pioneer heritage—Roberts’ great-grandparents came west on the Oregon Trail. She also read a section from her yet-to-be published autobiography that described her state patrol security staff and the care they took to protect her privacy. Fall Fest ’07 donated $100 in the governor’s name to the Portland State Walk of the Heroines.

As I prepared to write this copy for an early deadline, I found myself contrasting two recent get-togethers in which I participated. And those experiences emphasized the worth and benefits of membership and participation in retirement and volunteer activities, such as RAPS. The rewards are not just from the formal programs and events, but from the camaraderie and new acquaintances we find where we have a common interest.

The Fall Fest ‘07 brought 44 retirement association people from 10 regional universities. Sessions and discussions shared the diverse goals and missions of each group. But common to all groups was the shared purpose of preserving a community of interest for members who, individually, started careers from many different points—but ended up at career’s end in a university community. In our recent RAPS programs, we have heard the life paths of three faculty members that began in the traumas of Europe and World War II.

A week ago I attended a reunion of veterans who either didn’t know each other, or hadn’t seen each other, for 35 to 50 years. Our common shared experience was simply having served on the same Korean mountaintop, in the same unit, and with the same mission. It was fascinating to see, from this “community” of youth, where each person’s life path had taken him—as the vagaries of career, fate, and health interplayed.

Two orientations: “Looking backward” from our retirement groups, and the ability of “seeing forward” in the reunion of our youthful associations.

RAPS (and Robert Vogelsang) received kudos for hosting the regional Fall Fest ‘07 at PSU. Please check your calendars for our fall programs: Nov. 15, Pah Chen on a future alternative “hydrogen economy”; and Dec. 18 for our annual Holiday Dinner.

Book Club: A book about a rash promise

The RAPS book group will talk about Three Cups of Tea: One Man’s Mission to Promote Peace . . . One School at a Time, by Greg Mortenson and David O. Relin, on Tuesday, Nov. 20, at the home of Marge Terdal at 997 SW Westwood Drive, Portland. Contact her at terdlm@pdx.edu or at 503-244-5714 to RSVP and for directions.

Mortenson is the co-founder (with Dr. Jean Hoerni) and executive director of the nonprofit Central Asia Institute and is also founder of Pennies For Peace. This book is the winner of several state, regional, and national awards. Three Cups of Tea is described on the jacket as follows:

The inspiring account of one man’s campaign to build schools in the most dangerous, remote, and anti-American reaches of Asia.

In 1993 Greg Mortenson was the exhausted survivor of a failed attempt to ascend K2, an American climbing bum wandering emaciated and lost through Pakistan’s Karakoram Himalaya. After he was taken in and nursed back to health by the people of an impoverished Pakistani village, Mortenson promised to return one day and build them a school. From that rash, earnest promise grew one of the most incredible humanitarian campaigns of our time—Greg Mortenson’s one-man mission to counteract extremism by building schools, especially for girls, throughout the breeding ground of the Taliban.

Award-winning journalist David Oliver Relin has collaborated on this spellbinding account of Mortenson’s incredible accomplishments in a region where Americans are often feared and hated. In pursuit of his goal, Mortenson has survived kidnapping, fatwas issued by enraged mullahs, repeated death threats, and wrenching separations from his wife and children. But his success speaks for itself. At last count, his Central Asia Institute had built 55 schools. Three Cups of Tea is at once an unforgettable adventure and the inspiring true story of how one man really is changing the world—one school at a time.

We will not meet in December due to the holidays, but will start 2008 in January with Ivan Doig’s The Whistling Season.

Bridge Group meets Nov. 13

The next meeting of the RAPS Bridge Group will be at 1:00 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 13, at Willamette View. For details or further information about the group, please call Colin at 503-292-0838 or email colinkeld@gmail.com. If you would like to play, please call or email as soon as you can and no later than Friday, Nov. 9.

Hikers head to Mount St. Helens

The November hike will be another section of the Springwater Trail. The footbridge over McLoughlin was completed a few months ago, and we will hike that section beginning at 9:30 a.m. on Friday, Nov. 23. By the RAPS Sheet publication date, Larry will have an up-to-date map of that section of the trail and parking information. The hike will be less than five miles on a fairly level paved trail. Contact Larry at 503-771-1616 or larry_sawyer@comcast.net for more details. Please confirm your attendance by Thursday evening, Nov. 22.

The October hike to Mount St. Helens Ape Caves occurred after the RAPS Sheet deadline. Due to the holidays, there will be no hike in December.

PAST TENSE

Willard B. Spalding, Ed.D.

Educated at Harvard University, Willard B. Spalding came to the Portland State Extension Center in 1952 to lead Teacher Education after serving as superintendent of Portland Public Schools. By 1955 he was chair of the Education Division, overseeing the Education and Physical Education departments. With campus-wide faculty support, Spalding led the fight at the state level for Portland State to obtain certification and bachelor’s and master’s degree status in teacher education. His efforts opened the doors for parallel degrees in other academic areas at Portland State. Spalding was an outstanding teacher, administrator, and leader. These were Willard Spalding’s special gifts to the School of Education, Portland State University, and Oregon.

Past Tense features glimpses into Portland State’s past. To submit a story (or an idea for one), email the RAPS History Preservation Committee at raps@pdx.edu. Word count should not exceed 100.
Heading toward Hydrogen Economy—Real or Hype?" is the topic for the November RAPS meeting, presented by Pah Chen, professor emeritus of mechanical engineering. The program takes place Thursday, Nov. 15, 1:00 to 3:00 p.m., in Room 236 Smith Memorial Union.

The driving forces of the visionary hydrogen economy are the quest for clean fuels, peak oil theory, geo-political conflict, and the competition for oil from emerging countries. There are numerous signs indicating that fossil fuels will be replaced: revolutionary car designs for multiple fuels, mushrooming of ethanol plants, and potential initiation of hydrogen highways. Some organizations in industrial nations even go as far as advocating roadmaps to prepare for the advent of hydrogen economy.

However, there are also major obstacles, such as the high cost of fuel cell power plants, problems of mass production, and distribution of hydrogen to supply the need of hungry fuel tanks. Can hydrogen be produced economically to provide the demand of the ever-increasing energy consumption?

This program is an opportunity for all of us to become better informed about these critical issues involving hydrogen economy.

Pah Chen taught in the Department of Mechanical Engineering from 1966 to 2003. From 1977 to 1979 he was a visiting professor at the University of Petroleum and Minerals in Saudi Arabia. In 1984 he worked for PGE Trojan Nuclear Power Plant as an engineering specialist. He is a Fellow of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

If you missed the October program by Kilong Ung, a survivor of the Khmer Rouge genocide in Cambodia, Kilong suggests that you check his Web site www.kilongung.com. The pictures and graphic descriptions there make his story of survival and escape to a new life in Portland even more vivid.
