Are you interested in how behavior is learned, how it changes over time and experiences, and how you can analyze and change behavior to improve lives? If so, you may want to become certified in Applied Behavior Analysis (ABA). The BCBA program is fully online and prepares you with the knowledge and skills to become behavior analysts. You will receive expert content, graduate training in ABA, preparation for the national BCBA exam, and clinical experiences from practicing BCBAs with national and international experiences in ABA, positive behavior interventions and supports, and telehealth across home, school and community-based settings.

Choose between two program options:
1) 45-credit degree (master’s + BCBA coursework);
2) 29-credit non-degree (BCBA-verified coursework sequence).
