Prepare to teach high school in multiple settings

The Secondary Dual Educator Program (SDEP) is designed on the foundational belief that educational equity starts with inclusive teachers. Inclusive education incorporates social justice to build school communities where every student belongs! SDEP promotes equity by teaching that all students, those with and without disabilities, can and should learn together in the same classroom. One of only a handful of inclusive teacher preparation programs in the country, SDEP prepares our graduates to focus on meeting the academic and social needs of the full range of students in middle and high school classrooms. We seek individuals who feel passionate about improving the quality of life of their students by partnering with families and professionals in an inclusive school community setting. Graduates are highly regarded and hired by school districts and become teacher-leaders within their school communities.

Quick facts

• 98 quarter credits in a two year, full-time cohort model
• Preliminary teaching license with content area and special education endorsements and master’s degree
• Extensive practical experience in local schools throughout the program
• SDEP is a 2019 AACTE “Innovation Exchange” Research-to-Practice highlighted program