This course is designed to prove students with an in depth study of political development literature with a focus on modern Turkey. We will examine the role of political parties in Turkey’s political development, electoral politics, economic development, and the changing dynamics of domestic political scene in modern Turkey. Finally, we will examine challenges facing modern Turkey in the post-Cold War era and evaluate the impact of interest group politics on Turkish foreign policy-making.

Academic dishonesty will not be tolerated. An act of academic dishonesty (e.g., cheating, plagiarism, and unauthorized possession of examinations) will automatically result in a grade of “F” for the affected assignment and the case will be referred to university authorities.
