Weighing global issues on a human scale.

What conditions promote social equity alongside economic development and environmental protection? Can ecotourism be a viable business alternative to extracting natural resources for developing countries? Sociology professor Veronica Dujon helps her students understand globalization and sustainability from a more human perspective. It’s a method that they appreciate—Dujon is the first three-time winner of Portland State’s annual outstanding teacher award.

> pdx.edu/insidepsu