Reaping the facts, and weeding the myths about eco-roofs.

Saving energy and promoting sustainability through green building makes good business sense. Assessing these green building features is mechanical engineering professor David Sailor’s research focus. How well do eco-roofs perform in different climates? What’s not working? Together with researchers and industry, Sailor is making sure that the beauty of eco-friendly renderings translates into effective green building performance.

> knowledgeserves.pdx.edu